Siemens Limited appoints new Business Manager for Transmission and Distribution business, Siemens Energy Sector

Siemens Limited is pleased to announce that Mr. Aiden Cawley has been appointed business manager of transmission and distribution products for Siemens' Energy Sector. In his new role, Aiden will assume responsibility for the T&D business in Ireland, which reflects the growing market for T&D products and solutions.

Since 2005 Aiden has been sales manager for T&D products. Prior to that, he spent eight years working on international power related projects for Siemens worldwide as an electrical engineer. Aiden is an accomplished project engineer in the power industry and holds an electronics engineering degree from the University of Limerick.

Siemens is a global electronics and engineering company providing products, systems, services and solutions for the industry, energy and healthcare sectors. Siemens Energy Sector is the world's leading supplier of solutions for the generation, transmission and distribution of power. The company employs over 1,000 highly skilled people in Ireland and has offices in Dublin and Cork.
